Castles And Cathedrals: The Architecture Of Power, 1066-1550 (Cambridge History Programme Key Stage 3)

Synopsis

Castles and Cathedrals is a supplementary text in the Cambridge History Programme for key stage 3. It meets the requirements of supplementary study unit category A, extending the work undertaken in Medieval Britain. This full-colour text looks at the developing architecture of castles and cathedrals - the buildings which symbolise the most powerful forces in the medieval world. Through a combination of primary and secondary sources it examines what these buildings can reveal of the people who inhabited them and of medieval society in general. Castles and Cathedrals features: * enquiry-based units which pose key historical questions * a careful balance of investigation and explanation * overview sections which introduce and consolidate themes and concepts * an Attainment Target matrix for pupils and teachers * activities ranging in difficulty which enable pupils to meet the attainment targets

Customer Reviews

Castles and Cathedrals is a supplementary study unit for Key Stage 3 of the National Curriculum. It extends the work undertaken in the Core Study Unit on the Medieval World.

This book is an excellent introduction to castles, particularly for young adult readers. The illustrations and photos are excellent, and the captions help readers understand the purposes for building castles. It also shows the evolution of architecture over a period of time, and an introduction to life in a castle. The book also poses questions and exercises that help kids think beyond the information presented. Overall, this is an ideal book
