Documentary: A History Of The Non-Fiction Film

Synopsis

Now brought completely up to date, the new edition of this classic work on documentary films and filmmaking surveys the history of the genre from 1895 to the present day. With the myriad social upheavals over the past decade, documentaries have enjoyed an international renaissance; here Barnouw considers the medium in the light of an entirely new political and social climate. He examines as well the latest filmmaking technology, and the effects that video cassettes and cable television are having on the production of documentaries. And like the previous editions, Documentary is filled with photographs, many of them rare, collected during the author's travels around the world. Covering the full course of the documentary from Louis Lumiere's first effort to recent landmark productions such as Shoah, this book makes the growing importance of a unique blend of art and reality accessible and understandable to all film lovers.

"This is the best historical overview of that major genre termed 'Documentary' or 'Non-fiction.'"

--Edward S. Small, Phd., University of Kansas"Nothing compares, still." --Amy Villarejo, Cornell University"A reasonably priced introduction to a major area of film making which is all too often left in the shadow of drama. It is both thorough and readable." --Fred Caffney, South Kent College"First rate history--well written, with a coherent and constant focus on the power of the documentary film."

--Tom Mullin, Eastern Washington University"The best in its field. I have used the first edition for Barnouw's style has a clarity and precision that make his books delights to read." --Film Quarterly "The whole panorama has been richly researched and compactly organized into easy prose by Barnouw, writing at the peak of his competence." --Variety "Erik Barnouw puts film history in the mainstream of human history as few others have done before. Boorstin "Provides students with a foundation of knowledge from which they can learn, explore, and create." --Ronald A. Hoodak, Elmira College "Indispensable text. Easy, informative, and engaging read

Book I read some 15 years ago for documentary class. And I remembered it and was impressed with it's honest appraisal of the war movies, especially the ones that were exaggerations, half truths or edited before they could be shown. Interesting information.

As far as cinema studies goes, this is one of the classics; full of valuable information, reliable interpretations and insightful comments. If you're interested in the numerous facets of documentaries, you could do much worse than start with Barnouw's seminal book. Also, this is a very good example of great academic writing: clever but intriguing (granted, it's easier to write like that in writing history than theory, but nevertheless, you'll probably read this book with great pleasure). Highly recommended!

This book never disappoints as a deep history of documentary film and the early film genre altogether.

Must have for all documentary filmmaking aficionados!! Like the bible of documentary filmmaking, very well written, very interesting. Recommended to all filmmaker, journalist and wannabes!!

Thank you! Perfect condition.
