'This is a book that will be of benefit to seasoned professionals as well as newcomers working in any of the different fields involved in the provision of ART and infertility treatment. The information in Infertility Counseling may have the most relevance for mental health professionals, but it can have an impact on clinical practice for all of the professions that constitute the infertility team.' Fertility and Sterility

This book provides any mental health professional, physician, nurse, genetic counselor, embryologist, or other healthcare provider and members of the reproductive healthcare team with the knowledge and understanding needed to provide professionally competent, culturally sensitive assistance to infertile patients by addressing the complex psychosocial issues related to infertility.

This book is excellent for anyone in the mental health field who is offering counseling to women going through the fertility process. It is organized well and very thorough. I was hesitant to purchase this book at first because of the price but it is well worth it. I would highly recommend this book.

AN excellent resource.

Sharon Covington and Linda Hammer Burns have done an outstanding job on this second addition. I expected nothing but the best from these two strong leaders and educators in the field of infertility and reproduction. This is a "must have" for all clinicians to read and reference. It is well written, well organized and an easy to follow format. I especially appreciate the global perspective this book captures. It brings us new insights and developments in this fast growing complex field. Each distinguished contributing author approached his/her work with the most up-to-date literature, technology and information to help us stay abreast and within the forefront of our profession. Thank you for producing such a wonderful and valuable textbook. I have recommended this book to many colleagues and know you will too.
