Larry Diamond is a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution, co-editor of the Journal of Democracy, and co-director of the International Forum for Democratic Studies, of the National Endowment for Democracy. He is also professor of political science and sociology (by courtesy) at Stanford University and coordinator of the Democracy Program of the new Center for Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law at Stanford's Institute for International Studies. From January to April 2004, he served as a senior adviser to the Coalition Provisional Authority in Iraq.

This book does a good job of explaining what South Korea has done and needs to do in order to consolidate their democracy. The only issue I had with the book was that I was not very familiar with South Korean history and this book relies heavily on previous knowledge of the government and the events that have happened in the past 50 years or so. I read it for a political science class, so my professor filled in the gaps. Another problem is that the book does not flow very well because it is a compilation of different authors. Overall, a decent book.
