Be Your Best Without The Stress: It's Not About The Medal

Synopsis

Katrina Radke appeared to be on top of the world. At 14, she was the youngest member of the U.S. National Swim Team, and later she was a member of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team, placing fifth in the 200 meter butterfly at the Seoul Olympic Games. She won four gold medals internationally, held American records, U.S Open records, Australian Open records, and Italian Open records. She served as co-captain of the United States National Swimming Team and held Top 10 World Rankings for seven straight years. But what nobody knew was that she had been battling immune system issues since the age of 15, ultimately finding herself essentially bedridden, relegated to using handicapped parking, while in her final year of college at Cal Berkeley. After years of mystery, she was finally diagnosed with Chronic Fatigue Immune Dysfunction Syndrome (CFIDS), a debilitating chronic illness. Once she was able to put a name and face to her disability, she called upon her athlete's determination to fight her way back, ultimately even to swim again at the Olympic Trials. In Be Your Best Without the Stress, Katrina uses her inspirational story to guide others through the minefield of health and wellness issues. From farm town girl to Olympic Swimmer, to bedridden and beyond, therapist Katrina Radke uses her inspirational story, professional experiences, and powerful yet simple tools to help you find what drives you to be your best, while feeling deeply satisfied in all areas of your life. This life-changing book helps you awaken to lost aspects of yourself, become more aware of your impact and importance, and commit to decisive actions that will help you live your best life, one designed and fulfilled by you. Katrina provides specific tools to help guide you to success and fulfillment by helping you to: get clear on what motivates you (purpose and vision) so you can reach your dreams, manage obstacles (loss, injury, illness, distractions, stressors), take care of yourself on all levels (health physically, emotionally, spiritually, and in relationships), and fulfill your potential while feeling complete and deeply satisfied within.

Katrina Radke, MFT, is an internationally recognized Olympian, therapist, college psychology (sports psychology, human sexuality, general psychology) professor, performance and health coach, and motivational speaker. Her accomplishments include four international gold medals, U. S. National Team co-captain, American record and three Masters World records. She inspires even more by her grit and recovery from twelve years of debilitating disease to regain world ranking. She empowers others to find their true selves as they fulfill their potential and feel deeply satisfied within.

Katrina Radke surprised me! I expected to only find out about her Olympic journey, but instead I received a plethora of great stories, information and exercises to help me. She goes right to the heart of the matter on many topics, and is candid, truthful, and even funny at times! Unlike some books, you get the sense that this author walks the talk, and encourages you to do the same. It is nice to read a real account and suggestions from a mature Olympian's perspective of the journey rather than just a story about how "great and wonderful" they are. Not only does she candidly share obstacles that she had to overcome (especially regarding her health, as she had to reclaim herself in a new way, beyond her athletic experiences); she also backs it up using her psychology background and experience as a therapist to make sure the reader has ways to make changes in their own life. The inner journey that she undertook to rediscover herself in so many ways is profound, and inspirational. She uses a story to make a point but then backs it up with her professional expertise as she provides great detail about how we, too, can take responsibility to create the life we want. It reminded me that I, too, am capable and able to call upon my resilience and strength within to guide me, and therefore make a difference in this world. My life has been enriched in so many ways - I have new avenues to explore to perform at my best, take better care of myself, have more fulfilling relationships, and most importantly be okay with the truth of who I am - being me. I am reminded of the importance of fully engaging in my life so that I may feel more deeply satisfied. I love her subtitle, It's Not About the Medal. She does a great job explaining what she means, and how to find peace within right now- regardless of what has been going on in your life, or what it says on your resume thus far. It is a wonderful reminder that we are amazing human beings when we allow ourselves to let our true spirit shine. We are so much more than just our accomplishments. I think this book is for anyone who wants to live a better life, and bring out their true best, and who wants steps to do so. Most importantly it is also for anyone who wants to be inspired and realize that they can feel content within as they go through life's often bumpy road! Highly recommended!

The book was easy to read and understand. Her presentation as an athlete was complete. Especially exposing the coaches that push and push and push at the expense of the athlete. Little does a coach know how detrimental this is emotionally for the athlete, her health, and the stress it puts on the body when she will experience health issues down the road.

Fantastic book! I am taking a Sport Psychology class with Coach Katrina, and her optimism is contagious. This book contains loads of great tools for improving your life and reaching for your dreams. I am going to purchase the book for several friends for Christmas. I highly recommend it!

This book is a must read. We all think we are invincible by leading a high paced lifestyle. This book is for both athletes and non athletes on how to listen to our bodies physically, spiritually and emotionally by reading Katrina's journey on becoming an Olympian. Her journey is truly inspirational. A must read. Hard to put down. What a learning experience.

Katrina's book is a must read for the masses. I am a former professional athlete, a mother, and someone who has struggled with chronic fatigue. I appreciated her book from all these different angles. Katrina's sharing of her life story and how she healed from years of physical, emotional and mental stress due to her training is nothing short of awe inspiring. Katrina not only shares her own story with interesting and fun anecdotes, yet she also provides practical exercises to help one be their best in their own lives. These exercises are easy to incorporate and clearly the results show for themselves through Katrina's story. Katrina provides inspiration and an invitation to all to "be their best without the stress" -- something we ALL deserve.

Katrina's story is amazing to read and to relate to. She had a lot of success, turmoil and unknowns in her career, but ultimately she overcame her difficulties. She has such a competitive spirit but yet realizes the bigger perspective of enjoying the sport of swimming or anything in life, for that matter. She is now a coach and has a great approach to instruction and is always learning too!
